

THE 321ST INFANTRY

the command of Lieutenant Colonel Halstead from the time Colonel Shuttleworth left, March 26, until the arrival of Colonel Threlkeld, April 10. Later, at Camp Sevier, Colonel Threlkeld was transferred and Lieutenant Colonel Halstead was placed in command, being promoted to the rank of colonel, June 17, 1918. Major Barker, commanding the First Battalion, was succeeded by Major Angell, who was later succeeded by Major Pearle A. Davis. Captain Adams, commanding the Third Battalion, was succeeded by Major Warren S. Keith. The regiment was without a lieutenant colonel from June, 1918, when Lieutenant Colonel Halstead was placed in command, until September, 1918, when Lieut. Col. Clyde R. Abraham was assigned to the regiment at Denipère, St. Dié sector, Vosges Mountains. Lieutenant Colonel Abraham was with the regiment only a few days, being succeeded by Lieut. Col. John W. Blanding. Captain Bynum was succeeded as adjutant by Capt. William W. Roberts, December 25, 1918. On the eve of the regiment's return to the States, Major Schucker was made lieutenant colonel, taking the place of Lieutenant Colonel Blanding, who was away at school. But Lieutenant Colonel Schucker was loath to sever his relationship with the Second Battalion, because of his deep interest in the men of his command, and, therefore, retained his command of the Second Battalion until another change in
